Holista CollTech Low-GI Sugar Patent Clarification of Holista Announcements made on 6 and 16 January 2017

Holista CollTech Limited (Holista) refers to its announcement titled "Holista CollTech Collaborates with Nobel Prize Nominee To File Patent For Worlds First Low-GI Sugar With All Natural Ingredients" on 6 January 2017 and to the clarifications and updates provided in a subsequent announcement on 16 January 2017 (Announcements).

Holista would like to further clarify that nothing in the Announcements intended to suggest that Holista had filed a patent for or had produced the world's first low GI sugar.

Holista acknowledges that there are other low GI sugars and artificial sweeteners already available for consumption on the market. Holista also acknowledges that, to the extent the Announcements might have been misinterpreted to suggest that those other low GI sugars and artificial sweeteners contain a chemical base or do not taste of processed cane sugar (if that is incorrect), Holista did not intend to convey such message and extends an apology to their producers.

Holista intended only to convey that, in addition to its low GI sugar being able to substitute for a number of different sugars found in nature and be melted, baked and caramelised for use in all cooking applications, Holista's low GI sugar seeks to provide a low GI substitute for processed white cane sugar made with all-natural ingredients, and should mimic processed white cane sugar in look, taste and mouth feel.
